THE COLLECT

Almighty God, whose Son Jesus Christ is the resurrection and the life: raise us, who trust in him, from the death of sin to the life of righteousness, that we may seek those things which are above, where he reigns with you in the unity of the Holy Spirit, one God, now and for ever.

FLOWER OF THE WEEK: CEANOTHUS.

141st in a series.

Text and photographs by Peter Surridge.

Ceanothus originate from North and Central America with most of the 55 species being found in the south western United States – explaining the shrub's nickname California lilac. The flower heads may be reminiscent of lilac but in fact ceanothus are members of the buckthorn family. They were named ceanothus after the Greek kyanothos, meaning a spiny plant, though the connection is difficult to detect since the popular garden varieties are not thorny. The frothy flowers of most kinds are a true blue, unusual in flowering shrubs, ranging from pale hues to rich, deep shades. Most bloom in spring but a few types flower in summer or early autumn. Some are evergreen.

The most attractive and reliable evergreen kinds include: Concha (pictured), a dense shrubs with arching branches reaching 3m (10ft), on which dark red flower buds open to reveal deep blue blossoms in May; Burkwoodii, a bushy shrub, 1.5m tall and 1.8m wide (5ft x 6ft) which bears bright, mid-blue flowers from late summer to autumn; Cascade, which grows to 3.6m (12ft) and bears masses of powder-blue flowers in May and June on long arching branches which are easily trained against a wall; and Puget Blue, with sage green foliage and deep azure flowers from April to June on a shrub over 2m tall x 1.2m wide (7ft x 4ft). The variety Pin Cushion (pictured) is ideal for a small space, growing to $2m \times 2m$ (6ft x 6ft).

There are a few white-flowered varieties including Millerton Point which produces honey-scented blossoms in spring on upright growth to $3m \times 2m$ (10ft x 6ft), and Snow Flurries, also fragrant and of similar size but with the advantage of blooming into July.

Ceanothus need sun, good drainage and a sheltered position, growing well against a south or west facing wall. They prefer to be planted in spring and dislike root disturbance so the younger a shrub is when planted, the better it will grow. Most like seaside gardens but they can be seared by really cold winds. They also object to soil which is too limey though, if the leaves show symptoms of chlorosis – yellow veins caused by high lime content – Sequestrene watered around the shrub regularly can help. There are a few white-flowered varieties including Millerton Point which produces honey-scented blossoms in spring on upright growth to $3m \times 2m$ (10ft x 6ft), and Snow Flurries, also fragrant and of similar size but with the advantage of blooming into July. Pruning to retain the shrubs' shape is best carried out lightly after flowering.
